Tom: Hi, Aki. What are you doing?
Aki: I'm writing a letter to Emily, a member of my host family.
Tom: Oh, I remember. You stayed in Canada last summer, right?
Aki: Yes, I stayed there for a week in August.
Tom: Good!
Aki: Yesterday I received this birthday card from her.
Tom: Wow, it's beautiful.
Aki: I'm going to send this letter to her with these pictures.
Tom: That's good. Can I see them?
Aki: Of course, you can. [①]
Tom: Thanks. Oh, many students are in the gym. When did you take this picture?
Aki: At the school festival held in September. They're dancing together.
Tom: I see. They're cool! [②]
Aki: This is a picture of a chorus contest at the festival. Our class practiced hard every day and we became good friends.
Tom: Great!
Aki: In the third (A) one, you can see our classroom newspaper we made for the festival. We studied the history of our town and wrote about the traditional food. It was difficult, but interesting. We helped each other and learned many things.
Tom: You had a good experience.
Aki: Thank you.
Tom: I think Emily will be interested in our school festival.
Aki: I hope (B) so. I want to tell her a lot of things about my school, but it's difficult for me to write them in English.
Tom: Oh, I'll help you.
Aki: Thank you.

4 次は、イギリス北部のスコットランド (Scotland) に実在した犬のボビー (Bobby) とその飼い主のジョン (John) についての話です。これを読んで、(1)～(6)の問いに答えなさい。

In the 19th *century, there was a man in Scotland. His name was John. He worked for the city *police and his job was to *protect animals such as *cows or sheep at night. He needed a police dog because he had to catch bad people who were trying to *steal the animals. [①]

One day, John got a baby dog. He took him to his house and gave him the name Bobby. He liked Bobby very much and Bobby was always together with him. John taught a job to Bobby. He (A)disciplined Bobby to be a good police dog. Bobby learned how to catch bad people and helped John with his work. [②]

A few years later, John became sick and went into hospital. His doctor tried to make him better, but John died in 1858. He was only forty-five and Bobby was two years old at that time. It made his family and friends very sad. On his *last day, they were crying, but Bobby was quiet. They said, "Bobby is clever, so maybe he understands that [] ."

Bobby was taken to John's house right after he died, but he soon ran back to John's *grave and didn't move from there. He stayed there for a long time, even in the bad weather. Bobby's love for John impressed many people in the city. They thought that Bobby was protecting John's grave. So (B)they wanted to do something for him. Some people gave him food every day. Others made a small house for him.

Bobby died in 1872. He never forgot John until the last day of his life. So he kept staying at John's grave almost every day for fourteen years. After that, the story of John and Bobby became famous in Scotland. The books about them are written and read in many countries. Today, Bobby is sleeping under the ground near John's grave, and people who learned about Bobby still love him and visit the city in Scotland. [③]

【注】 *century: 世紀 *police: 警察 *protect: 守る
*cows or sheep: 牛や羊 *steal: 盗む *last: 最期の
*grave: 墓
